

Purpose and Eligibility for 2021-2022 Recruitment Awards

There are five recruitment awards. The awards are multi-year packages designed to guarantee that the student receives full stipend, tuition and health insurance throughout the time they are working towards the Ph.D. or M.F.A. degree. At least one year is a pure graduate fellowship with no duties beyond continued progress towards the degree. During that year, the stipend level is $19,000-$25,000 depending on the discipline. The fellowship year stipend and subsidized health insurance are provided by the University Graduate School. Tuition is funded by the department, College, or School. For the remaining 2-4 years, funding is the responsibility of the Department and is derived from a combination of awards, scholarships, research and/or teaching assistantships. Because the multi-year fellowships are intended primarily as recruitment tools for Ph.D. and M.F.A programs, funds for a recruiting visit to Bloomington are also included.

**Please see below for the typical funding templates for these awards*****

General eligibility criteria:

1. Nominees must be new students proposing to enter a Ph.D. or M.F.A. program. Current IU students are only eligible if they are newly applying into a Ph.D. or M.F.A. program for the following fall term.
2. Nominees should have outstanding academic backgrounds and excellent chances of obtaining their Ph.D. or M.F.A. degree. An undergraduate GPA of at least 3.5 is strongly recommended, but Master's coursework and other relevant experience will also be recognized.
3. Students must be nominated by their departments/schools. In nominating the student, the department agrees to support and to train that student, and to encourage the student's participation in campus-wide mentoring activities, as appropriate. Departments must also agree to ensure that award recipients do not accept other graduate awards or employment during the period of funding, and to submit an annual progress report on behalf of the student.
4. The nominating department agrees to provide 2-4 years of graduate appointments (e.g., Aiship, RAship or GAship), plus tuition and subsidized health insurance, turning the one year of stipend funding from the University Graduate School into a multi-year package. We encourage departments to put together 3-year packages for M.F.A. students, 4-year packages for students entering with a Master's degree, and 5-year packages for students entering with a bachelor's degree.

2021-2022 Recruitment
Awards Nomination
Guidelines

CONFIDENTIALITY – Each nomination is confidential and will only be viewed by the selection committee and by professional staff who administer the awards.

The Chair of Graduate Admissions, Director of Graduate Studies, Departmental Chair, or Associate Dean of Graduate Studies should complete and submit the following for each student nominee (no more than four (4) student nominations for each award):

1. Secure approval from their dean of graduate studies (i.e. School of Education, School of Optometry—dean's approval is not required for programs in the College of Arts and Sciences).
2. Rank your department's nominations with #1 being the strongest candidate for the award(s) for which each student is eligible. Please list candidate names in alphabetic order. These nominations should be listed on the Nomination and Ranking Form above.
3. A complete copy of the student's application for admission to Indiana University.
Applications must include:
  1. Application form
  2. Statement of purpose
  3. Recommendation letters
  4. Transcripts and official GRE test scores
  5. McNair Scholars certification (if applicable)
4. A brief supporting statement (no more than 2 paragraphs) explaining: a) why this candidate is outstanding; b) how well matched the candidate's interests are to the strengths of the department; c) how the department recruited the student (how much contact and by which faculty); d) the likelihood the candidate will choose IU over competing offers.
5. A brief funding statement (1-2 paragraphs) describing how the department plans to fund students in the years in which they are not receiving fellowship funds. This should include anticipated stipend amounts for SAAs, any available funding for further fellowship years, possible funding from the school/college, potential travel funds, and/or available funding through training or research grants. Please keep in mind that whatever funding the department provides must cover health insurance and a fee remission. When considering funding students in future years, 3-year packages should be developed for incoming M.F.A. students, 4-year packages for Ph.D.-seeking students entering with a Master's degree, and 5-year packages for Ph.D.-seeking students entering with a bachelor's degree. Please see below for the typical funding templates for these awards. The same funding outline may be used for each application, but please include it with each nomination packet.
6. A brief department diversity statement, describing the department's current diversity and any initiatives to increase recruitment and retention of a more diverse graduate student population. Each statement should be tailored to the particular fellowship the nomination is for. For example, what efforts has the department made to identify and to recruit members of underrepresented groups? What mentoring activities, professional-skills training, and career-development opportunities will be available to the student in your department?

2021-2022 Recruitment Awards Frequently Asked Questions

Q. What is the difference between the terms minority and underrepresented student?

A. There is no consensus on the definition of minority. For example, even government agencies (i.e.; U.S. Census Bureau, U.S. Department of Education, and U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission) define the term differently. The University Graduate School uses the term minority to mean individuals who are members of ethnic minority groups that experience disproportionately lower educational attainment rates at the high school and baccalaureate levels (e.g., African Americans, Asian Americans, Hispanic/Latino Americans, and Native Americans/First Nations).

Groups who are underrepresented in graduate education include disadvantaged, low-income, and/or first-generation college students. Due to disproportional gaps related to gender in entry, persistence and attainment of doctoral degrees in mathematics, science and technology, women in science are also underrepresented.

Q. If a student does not identify their diversity/minority status, can the department pursue diversity-building graduate awards on their behalf?

A. No, a student must self-identify her/himself.

Q. Why are different disciplines awarded different stipend amounts?

A. Graduate student stipends differ markedly across disciplines, whether students are paid through teaching or research assistantships, or via external graduate scholarships. Our graduate scholarship stipend amounts are flexible to suit the different needs of different departments.

Q. How many credit hours are associated with each multi-year package per year?

A. The recruitment awards offer 24-30 credit hours of tuition during the first year of funding, depending on the School or College. Credit hours for future award years depend on the department. Awards that include graduate appointments typically offer 30 credit hours per year. A 30-credit-hour fee remission includes a maximum of 12 credit hours each semester and a maximum of 6 credit hours in the summer term.

Q. How does a student apply for one of the recruitment awards?

A. To be considered for nomination for a recruitment award by the University Graduate School, entering students must submit the IU Application and Financial Aid form by January 15. Their prospective academic department must then also submit a complete nomination form by February 1, 2019. Nominees are placed into a pool for campus-wide competition. The recruitment award selection committees will choose recipients during February and March. Students then have until April 19 to accept or decline the recruitment awards.

Q. Who is a 'new' graduate student?

A. A student who has not yet enrolled in the nominating degree program. Current Master's students are eligible if they have formally applied for admission into a Ph.D. program.

Q. Should departments nominate a single individual for more than one type of recruitment award?

A. Yes, if they meet all eligibility requirements.

Q. Who receives application fee waivers from The University Graduate School?

A. The University Graduate School participates in several programs designed to expand participation of underrepresented groups in graduate education. Prospective student applicants who have participated in any one of several IU summer research programs; are members of a professional organization such as SACNAS, AISES, ABRCMS, NPSC or AGEP; or who apply through programs such as Project 1000, McNair Scholars Program, Big Ten Academic Alliance Free App Program, National GEM Consortium or National Physical Science Consortium \(NPSC\) may be eligible for a waiver of the application fee.

Q. How brief should a "brief supporting statement" be?

A. About two paragraphs.

Q. Can the one-year of University Graduate School stipend funding be split into two half years?

A. Yes. The department is free to schedule stipend funding in whatever way makes the most sense in terms of the student's training and career goals.

Q. What is a department's obligation in nominating a student?

A. In nominating a student and subsequently accepting a diversity-building graduate fellowship recipient into their graduate program, the Department agrees to support, train and mentor that student as needed to help them successfully complete the PhD or MFA degree, to provide funding as detailed in the nomination, and to submit annual progress reports for each recipient.

Q. Do the recruitment awards have a summer component?

A. Each multi-year package should include provisions for summer funding, whenever possible. The stipend offered by the University Graduate School is intended to cover the academic year (fall and spring). If departments or students have questions about eligibility for summer funding, work, or other opportunities, they should contact the University Graduate School at ugsawrd@indiana.edu.

Q. What are the evaluation and selection processes?

A. Evaluation and selection will take into consideration the student's academic record, research and personal experiences, as well as the departmental recruitment efforts, retention rates, and proposed funding plan.

Q. How do departments know when an underrepresented student applies as a McNair Scholar or through other programs?

A. Visit the University Graduate School online application database or contact the school's admission office (Kim Bunch or Anna Vinson-Chastain).

Q. How can students find out about the University Graduate School funding opportunities?

A. Prospective students can be made of aware of these awards via their Director of Graduate Studies, the University Graduate School website (<http://graduate.indiana.edu/admissions/financial-support/fellowships-awards/index.shtml>), emails, and/or the IU GradGrants Center (<http://www.indiana.edu/~gradgrnt/>).

Q. What is considered full-time enrollment?

A. Graduate students who hold student academic appointments (AI, GA, or RA) with 37.5% FTE (15 hours of duties per week) must enroll in no less than 6 credit hours—or G901—each semester to be considered full time. Graduate students who hold fellowships must enroll in a minimum of 6 credit hours each semester unless they have been formally advanced to Ph.D. candidacy. Graduate students who do not hold institutional funding of any kind and who have not been formally advanced to Ph.D. candidacy must enroll in 8 credit hours—or 6 credit hours of G901—each semester to be considered full time. Ph.D. students who have been formally advanced to Ph.D. candidacy and who do not hold student academic appointments will be considered full time if they enroll in a minimum of 1 credit hour of Ph.D. thesis credit each semester.

Q. Are there any travel or research monies for students available through The University Graduate School?

A. Opportunities for small funding are available to students in particular disciplines, with particular needs, and through a variety of programs. Current graduate and professional students are encouraged to apply for GPSG Travel Grants fall and spring semester competitions (<http://www.indiana.edu/~gpso/awards-funding/travel-awards/>). The University Graduate School website will list information on other opportunities as they become available.
